Ophthalmologist Ken Van Blaricum designed Sight Examiner in order to provide a reliable tool for people, with or without glasses, to test their eyesight. Now, you can examine your vision with ease. All you have to do is launch the program, set the screen resolution / size and press the "Test" button. Frequent VMWare workstation has become a major problem on any computer. This is caused by the fact that in every installation of VMWare Server there should be a virtual machine running. It's a common problem that our laptops have many VMWare connections, all running VMs. If you like, you can choose between two options. The first one is to disable all VMWare connections and then reboot the computer, restarting VMWare Workstation. The second is to reboot the computer, VMWare Workstation and then disable all connections. I personally suggest to disable all VMWare connections, since this option will not require any reboot. For this you need to open a Command Prompt with Administrator rights. Please note that you have to close all VMWare connections before shutting down the computer, so that it's done correctly. There are two methods of doing this. 1) Right-click on the desktop and choose "Shutdown Windows Explorer". A menu will appear, choose "Shutdown". If you want to force a shutdown instead of a logoff, you must press the power button, and keep holding it until the computer shuts down. 2) Click on "Start" and choose "Run". In the text box, type "cmd" and press Enter. A Command Prompt will appear. Then, enter "shutdown.exe" and press Enter. You will have to do the same thing as in the previous method. Now, type "netsh int ipv4" and press Enter. You will see a list of network adapters, and in that list you will see all connected VMWare machines. You need to remove them from the list and close all connections. If you don't like this, you can try to find a list of all connections, using the command "ipconfig /all". If you have network adapters that aren't shown there, you can delete them manually. I suggest you to rename all adapters so that you won't have any problems. If you want to remove all of them, you can use the command "netsh advfirewall delete all

What's New In?

Sight Examiner is a tool that allows the user to examine their visual acuity using the scientific method of presenting a series of angles to the user and determining which gives the best definition of the visual field. This program may not only help someone who is having difficulty reading the fine print but may also allow someone to determine if they are nearsighted, farsighted or have astigmatism. Features: * Show user the angle of vision relative to their field of vision, so they can clearly see if they have any refractive errors. * Use the full field to determine if there is an uncorrected refractive error or if the problem is with vision. * Allows you to start with the first reading distance and determine if your vision is normal or nearsighted. * The vision tester is a total non-invasive test that you can do with or without glasses on. * Practice to help you become more familiar with the test before taking it when using your glasses. * The vision tester can determine if there is a refractive error (which can be corrected), if the problem is with vision (which may be corrected) or if there is no problem. * Practice with different magnification levels to help you become familiar with the vision tester. * Listings by refractive error and other medical problems. * You can change the tint on the main window for a better view. * Test distance and screen resolutions (from minimum of 200DPI to maximum of 1920DPI). * Has an "Exit" button so you can stop the test and continue on with other work. * When you complete the test you will see the score on the screen. * Has an "Automatically save test results" option, so you can save the test results when you exit without saving it. Requirements: * Mac OSX 10.5 or above * IOS 4.2 or above * Mac OSX 10.5 or above Author: * Debra Dalton * FILED NOT FOR PUBLICATION
