I've recently started to work with.NETStandard 2.0 and.NET Core. Is there a plugin that I can use to do this conversion easily, or do I have to manually convert everything? This is not a duplicate of the question below, as the previous asked about a language to do the conversion, and I am looking for a plugin to convert the project. A: I think that you are asking about the reverse conversion, creating.Net core projects from existing.Net Standard 2.0 projects. This is possible, by using a new "File -> Export project" or "right click on solution -> Export" option. This will generate a csproj file for.NET core projects. For.Net core framework and.Net framework projects this will work, but for.Net standard projects you will need a conversion tool. Article content CHICAGO — Sunday night's CFL all-star game in Atlanta, Georgia, saw all-star linebacker Solomon Elimimian snagging the first all-star-game interception, but it was a defence that was better in the all-star game than the 2013 Grey Cup Champion Montreal Alouettes. And not that defence was the Atlanta Xtra-Turfs against the league's best, but it was the Chicago Bears' wild card defence against the league's elite offence in the debut of the new all-star game format. Try refreshing your browser, or After wild week, Als don't let Grey Cup hangover affect all-star game Back to video Only the two wild cards in the CFL are the top two teams in the East and West Division, but both the NFL's Tennessee Titans and Atlanta Falcons are off this week. And in a competitive game like Sunday, it's a good thing the Als weren't playing the Titans in their home opener.
